

Small Groups Sessions

Each week we'll take what we heard on Sunday and consider what that means for our lives through reading scripture, questions and prayer.

A helpful framework for good discussion that we've been using in some of our leadership development training involves 3 key questions:

1. What is?

This question helps us to consider two main things:

a) What does the Bible say?

The Bible is God's true and authoritative word, and so we should begin by looking at what the Bible says is true about us for each topic.

b) What is the reality in our lives right now?

As we read God's word, we begin to realise that our experience doesn't tend to match up with it. It's important to consider what those things are that stop us in walking in the fullness of our identity in Christ.

2. What could be?

Using our holy imagination, what impact would we see in our lives, homes, church and communities if we were to grow in the area in question?

If this way of life became truly embedded into us, what would we see in one month, one year or even in one lifetime?

3. What will be?

We are told not to be hearers of the word only, but doers. (James 1:22)

Each week we want to implement God's way into the coming week, and to do this we give time to consider two questions:

a) What is God saying?

The Sunday sermon and the small group discussion so far will have brought up many things.

The key here is to try and boil it down to one key, memorable thing that God is saying to us. This could be an unshakeable thought, realisation of a sin, wrong-thinking or a specific action you sense God is calling you to.

b) What am I going to do about it?

This is where we get practical: if God is speaking to me about this, what can I do in the next week about it?

Encourage one another to make this as specific and actionable as possible, and to avoid vague or fluffy answers. Build an expectation that we are going to walk in truth each week.

The Kairos Circle - A Tool for Transformation

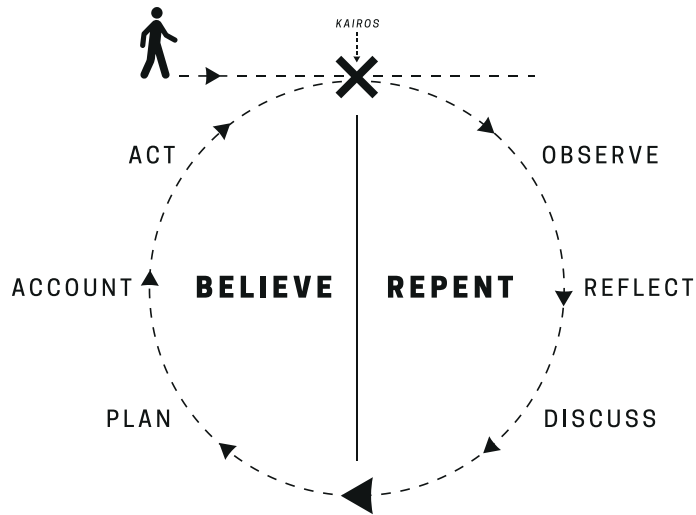

These questions are based off a helpful tool that underpins our understanding of godly transformation from Mike Breen's book "Building a Discipling Culture" - something he calls a kairos moment.*

A kairos moment is a point or experience in life, either positive or negative, in which the Lord is speaking to us. At that moment we have two options: we can choose to ignore Him and carry on, or stop and allow the Holy Spirit to take us on a journey of transformation and belief.

In order to experience this transformation, we need to do what Jesus explains as "repent and believe". (Mark 1:15)

In the kairos circle, repent and believe are divided into three parts. A disciple who is being transformed walks around the circle, repenting first and then believing.

*Mike Breen says "A kairos moment is when the eternal God breaks into your circumstances with an event that gathers some loose ends of your life and knots them together in his hands."

Step 1: Repent

Observe

In order to change you need to observe where you are. During a kairos moment, observe your reactions, emotions and thoughts.

Reflect

Why did you react the way you did? Why do you feel the way you do? Why did that emotion get brought to the surface?

Discuss

Inviting others into the process is a vital part of transformation, and Small Groups are an excellent place for this. A place where people can share and confess openly and honestly with trustworthy friends who will pray and stand with them is vital.

Step 2: Believe

Plan

Get practical. Make a plan for how you are going to lead inner change in your life.

Account

It's important to have at least one person holding us accountable to our plan. This process externalises the plan instead of letting it remain internal.

Act

Once a plan is established and shared with someone else, the natural reaction is for action to take place.

5. The Corporate Disciple

1 Corinthians 12:12-20

For just as the body is one and has many members, and all the members of the body, though many, are one body, so it is with Christ. For in one Spirit we were all baptized into one body—Jews or Greeks, slaves or free—and all were made to drink of one Spirit. For the body does not consist of one member but of many. If the foot should say, “Because I am not a hand, I do not belong to the body”, that would not make it any less a part of the body. And if the ear should say, “Because I am not an eye, I do not belong to the body”, that would not make it any less a part of the body. If the whole body were an eye, where would be the sense of hearing? If the whole body were an ear, where would be the sense of smell? But as it is, God arranged the members in the body, each one of them, as he chose. If all were a single member, where would the body be? As it is, there are many parts, yet one body.

Overview

The disciple is not called to a solo mission but rather to a corporate one. The life of the disciple is shaped by the ‘we’ rather than the ‘I’. Sadly, the church in Corinth had lost sight of the importance of the corporate family of God; they viewed God’s people as a vehicle for individual gain rather than as a united unit. They viewed spiritual gifts as an opportunity to impress and show how they were more spiritual than others. They gave no space to others’ gifts, interrupting to gain the spotlight.

This attitude permeates our western culture today; ‘Individualitis’. We read scripture through an individual lens; we process calling through that lens; our money, possessions, time, gifts, jobs, relationships etc. are all viewed as mine. Everyone has been given, by God, an essential role to play in His kingdom. For the Church to truly become all she is called to be, it will take every part of the body playing their part.
